Business Intelligence

Business Intelligence is a broad topic and has broad interest to ITANA members. Activities at member institutions around business intelligence are broad and diverse. They can range from data definition work to building out infrastructure. Business Intelligence is defined broadly at different institutions.

ITANA has decided to park business intelligence as a topic for the time being (March 2010). As per the discussion on the March 4, 2010 conference call:

> True business intelligence means support for specific analytics, dashboards, what tools using for those. It is a big hairy topic and can consume large amounts of energy (just like content management does). We suggest we let it rest unless there is a burning interest in exploring it.
